Finance

Finance is an increasingly complex and important component of the competitive global economy. Consequently, there are myriad career opportunities within financial services at corporations, investment firms, and financial institutions worldwide. To complete the finance major, students must take seven courses comprised of both required and elective components for a total of at least 21 credits. Required courses provide a solid foundation, while electives enable students to tailor their studies to specific career goals.

Students are also encouraged to engage in discipline-specific extracurricular activities as a complement to their formal academic studies. This may include student-managed investment funds, clubs/societies, visiting speakers, field trips, conferences/symposia, internships, and networking events with alumni and industry professionals. Lehigh enjoys a relative advantage in this regard given an alumni base that is well respected in all areas of finance and the University’s proximity to major financial institutions and markets. To expand their knowledge dimensions, majors can also undertake minors that are related to finance such as the Real Estate Minor or the FinTech Minor
